1. Overview of Consolidated Financial Results

(1) Overview of Operating Results

i Trends of Economics and Finance

Looking back at Japan's economy during this fiscal year, although the influence of U.S. trade policy remains, corporate earnings are showing signs of improvement and capital investments aimed at solving corporate challenges in labor shortages and DX are recovering gradually. Additionally, personal consumption rebounded supported by improvements in employment and income resulting in a moderate economic recovery. However, the outlook remains uncertain with potential downward pressure on the economy from surging crude oil prices due to escalating Middle East tensions and raw material supply constraints stemming from logistical disruptions.

In this region centered on Aichi Prefecture which is our Group's main business base, housing investment is weak mainly due to soaring housing prices, however, capital investment is increasing with investments expected in the automotive industry mainly for structural transformation with the shift to electric vehicles and software development and in the non-manufacturing sector, investments are expected in infrastructure in the introduction of robots that lead to labor-saving and efficiency improvements. Production and exports are on an upward trend supported by robust domestic and international demand. Furthermore, despite the impact of rising prices on consumer spending, the economy is experiencing a gradual recovery driven by a moderate improvement in employment and income.

Looking at the financial side, the yen weakened against the US dollar in the first half of the period reaching the 147 yen range by the end of September due to rising political instability in Japan and receding expectations of interest rate cuts based on strong US economic indicators. In the latter half, the dollar rose further to the 158 yen level towards the end of the period due to factors such as a decline in expectations of an interest rate hike by the Bank of Japan following the results of the ruling party's presidential election in October, rising crude oil prices due to the escalating tensions in the Middle East since March, and a strengthening of risk aversion among investors.

In the first half of the period, the Nikkei stock average closed at 44,932 yen at the end of September setting a new monthly closing record driven by a reduction in uncertainty surrounding U.S.-Japan tariff negotiations and a rise in semiconductor-related stocks due to expectations of growth in the AI market. Subsequently, following the results of the general election, expectations for economic policies rose, and the index reached a new record high of over 58,800 yen in February. However, in March, the index closed at 51,063 yen due to a surge in crude oil prices caused by heightened tensions in the Middle East and increased concerns about a downturn in the economy.

ii Results of the Group

In the above-mentioned environment, the Group's business performance for the fiscal year ended March 31, 2026 was as follows:

Ordinary income increased by 24,101 million yen year on year to 125,137 million yen due to increases in interest on loans and bills discounted and gains on sales of stocks. On the other hand, ordinary expenses increased by 3,470 million yen year on year to 94,225 million yen mainly attributable to higher deposit interest.

As a result, ordinary profits increased by 20,630 million yen compared to the previous fiscal year to 30,912 million yen. Additionally, profit attributable to owners of parent increased by 12,711 million yen year on year to 21,808 million yen. Looking at each segment, ordinary income for the banking business increased by 21,803 million yen year on year to 113,377 million yen, and segment profits increased by 20,458 million yen year on year to 30,737 million yen.
